

Candidates are Consumers, Too

In an era of growing talent shortages, understanding who candidates are, how to attract them and what drives their decision-making is essential to building and sustaining a successful recruiting and retention strategy.

Singapore Insights

Companies should devote equal energy and resources toward the candidate experience as they do to the consumer experience.

58% of candidates say that a negative experience makes them less likely to buy a company's products or services.

60% of candidates say they are more likely to work for a company whose products they buy or use.

Most Impactful Negative Candidate Experiences on Purchase Behavior

Lack of transparency on salary or job description

Global: 63%

Negative interview experience

Global: 59%

No employer follow up after initial interview

Global: 57%

No response to a submitted job application

Global: 59%

Failure to address poor feedback on employer review sites

Global: 49%

A friend's negative experience

Global: 50%

Most Impactful Aspects of Employer Brand on Purchase Behavior

Lack of employer-employee trust

Global: 42%

Lack of transparency

Global: 43%

Lack of consistency in words or actions

Global: 40%

Lack of employer-employee communication

Global: 36%

Negative review on employer review site (e.g., Glassdoor)

Global: 30%

Ill-defined or traditional company culture

Global: 18%

The Ripple Effects of a negative candidate experience extend far beyond the candidate who experienced it.

56% of candidates say they would tell others about a negative experience.

57% of candidates say the negative candidate experience of a friend would make them less likely to buy a product or service.

5 Practical Suggestions to Strengthen Your Employer Brand

1 Make a Case for Investment

Proper investment in human resources, the candidate experience, and employer brand will have a positive return on investment in the form of both human capital and revenue.

2 Relieve Overwhelmed Recruiters

Reposition the HR function as a de facto customer service experience to help transform recruiting into an employer brand and consumer brand building function.

3 Be Transparent

Transparency is a key value for candidates so there is no substitution for cultivating stronger relationships with candidates and employees.

4 Cultivate the Consumer Talent Pool

Consumers are a valuable talent pool. In many cases they already understand and share many of the core values of an organization.

5 Pose as a Secret Shopper

Experience first-hand what candidates experience in the hiring process.